Buying Property

Private housing is purchased by either "private treaty" or at auction. The real estate agent receives a commission from the seller on the sale of the property. 'Stamp Duty' is a tax on the sale of the property and is payable by the purchaser.

The legal formalities of buying are handled either by solicitors or non-legal specialists. As well as looking at the sale contract they organise searches (eg. for restrictions on land use, validity of title) and arrange inspections (eg. pest and building inspections,). They also attend the final settlement to ensure all payments are made.

For further information visit the Real Estate Institute of Victoria at www.reiv.com.au.

For up to date information on current purchase prices, visit www.domain.com.au or www.realestate.com.au.

Driving in Victoria

Drink driving laws are very strict in Victoria and the police frequently carry out random breath testing. Drivers with a blood alcohol level greater than .05% will lose their driving licence for over three months and may be fined as well. The wearing of seat belts is compulsory for all people in a car. Children and babies must travel in approved child and infant restraints. Motorcyclists are required to wear a helmet.

The speed limit is generally 100 kph on freeways and 60 kph in residential areas. Speed cameras operate randomly throughout the state and large fines (and in some cases licence suspension) are imposed for any infringement of the speed limit.

TRAMS

Melbourne, the only city in Australia with trams as a major form of transport, has unique rules governing safety and car/tram progress. In general, these rules give right of way to tram and tram passengers. Melbourne's "hook turns" are found at a number of intersections in down town Melbourne. The signs for these can be seen at the side of the road or hung from tram wires.

There are also roads that are designated as fairways. Yellow lines and tram signs along these roads give trams priority at certain times, by prohibiting vehicle access to the tram lane.

For more detailed information refer to www.vicroads.vic.gov.au.

Driving Licences

For those relocating from interstate and New Zealand, you may drive for the first three months from your arrival on your existing licence. After three months, if you wish to drive, you must obtain a Victorian licence. To do this you simply hand in your licence and proof of your identity and citizenship status. For Australians there is no cost, New Zealanders pay a licence fee.

For overseas licence holders, if you are in Victoria on a temporary visa, you can drive on your overseas licence (provided it is a current licence) for an indefinite period provided your overseas licence is in English (or you have an English translation), or you have an International Driving Permit.

If you are in Victoria on a permanent visa, you can drive on your overseas licence for only three months from the date you entered Victoria or from the time a permanent visa was issued to you. If you want to continue to drive in Victoria after that time you must apply for a Victorian driver licence.

Drivers of less than three years experience will be given a probationary licence, as is customary for native Victorians. The rules and test requirements are explained in the Victorian Traffic Handbook.

Further information and tests, and current information on applicable fees are provided through Vic Roads offices, call 13 11 73, or check the website at www.vicroads.vic.gov.au.

Education

STATE SCHOOLS

Schooling in Victoria is divided into Primary and Secondary School.

PRIMARY SCHOOLS

Primary school covers a seven-year span from Preparatory to Year Six, after which children move on to secondary education. School hours are usually 9am - 3pm. School uniform is not compulsory in government schools.

SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Secondary schooling covers Years 7 to 12. Most schools favour the wearing of school uniforms. Students are required to purchase their own textbooks.

At the end of Year 12 students endeavour to have completed their Victorian Certificate of Education (VCE) and gain entry into tertiary institutions.

A guide to VCE is available from the Victorian Board of Studies, call 9641 0300 or visit www.vcaa.vic.edu.au.

In Victoria, government schools are zoned, that is, if you choose to attend a government school you have to attend the school in your local area of residence.

To find a government school please visit: www.eduweb.vic.gov.au/schoolsonline.

FEES AT STATE SCHOOLS

Holders of a Permanent Resident Visa or a long term Business Visa (subclass 457) can enrol directly at a public school and do not have to pay fees.

INDEPENDENT (PRIVATE) SCHOOLS

There are more than 200 independent schools in Victoria providing a diverse range of programmes, philosophies and educational opportunities.

To help you find the right school, use the following link:

<http://www.ais.vic.edu.au/>.

Schools matching the nominated criteria will be listed with their address, school philosophy, fee range, enrolment range and where available a direct link to the school's web site.

CATHOLIC SCHOOLS

The Archdiocese of Melbourne hosts the largest Catholic education system in the country, with 256 primary schools, 65 secondary schools and 7 special schools. Catholic schools in this Archdiocese educate approximately one in five metropolitan students.

Catholic schools, partners with parents in the education of their children, and partners with the Church in faith education, are available to families across Victoria, in city and remote areas.

Catholic schools practise and celebrate Christian values and provide religious education and opportunities for faith development in communities where prayer and sacramental celebrations are integral. They educate students for engagement in civic and public life, involving community service and issues of social justice and are accountable for the proper expenditure of government funds and parent fees and accountable to parents and governments for student learning.

Visit the school directory at www.ceo.melb.catholic.edu.au to locate, or view information about, all Victorian Catholic schools.

Renting Property

You may wish to begin your search online at www.domain.com.au or www.realestate.com.au.

APPLICATION FOR TENANCY

When a home is selected to rent, the Real Estate Agent will ask for an application form to be completed. This requests personal details, previous landlord and employment references, as well as credit references.

Once your application has been accepted a tenancy agreement is signed.

RESIDENTIAL TENANCY AGREEMENT

There is a standard form for written tenancy agreements and it must be used. This has to be agreed upon and by both tenant and landlord before signing. Often there are additional clauses added i.e. Landlord will provide garden maintenance to the property.

DEPOSIT

The landlord or agent can accept a payment from a tenant as a sign of good faith by the prospective tenant, with the money refunded once the tenancy agreement is made.

BOND AND CONDITION REPORT

The bond is money that the tenant puts up as security. The landlord or agent and the tenant have to complete and sign the official bond lodgement form with The Bond Authority. During the period of tenancy the Residential Tenancies Bond Authority holds the bond in trust. The money is returned at the end of the tenancy. Income earned on the bond is paid into the residential tenancies fund, which is used to pay for the administration of the act. A landlord taking a bond has to prepare a condition report on the premises and this has to be signed by the tenant before they occupy the premises.

RENT

Rent is payable in advance, generally one calendar month in advance. It is the tenants obligation to pay the rent when due and they must receive a receipt.

LOOKING FOR RENTAL PROPERTY

Real estate agents all have their own rent rolls, there is no multi listing and generally landlords select one agent to look after the property. The agent receives a fee from the landlord for finding a tenant and charges an on going management fee. Properties are advertised on Saturdays and some on Wednesdays in The Age. The local newspapers also carry advertisements on a weekly basis. These are delivered to homes for free but are also available in local newsagents.
